*Kingston Arts Council
7 February – 21 March*

Introducing the Digital Community Whiteboard!

This live, interactive art experience invites Kingston to come together to create, share, and connect in real time. Whether you're a seasoned artist, an aspiring writer, or just someone curious to try something new, this project is for you!

This interactive live-digital art experience is all about bringing Kingston together to create, share, and connect in real time! Hosted on the collaborative design platform Canva, the Digital Community Whiteboard (DCW) transforms how we think about creativity by inviting participants to contribute their drawings, stories, and ideas to a shared digital whiteboard. Whether you're an artist, writer, or just someone curious to try something new, this project is for you!

What is the Digital Community Whiteboard?

The Digital Community Whiteboard (DCW) is a shared online art project where everyone can add their own creativity. Think of it as a living, digital blank paper – accessible to anyone and shaped by everyone. It's projected live on the wall in Unit 115, so you can see it grow as people add drawings, stories, and ideas. Whether you join in from your home computer or visit the gallery to contribute on-site, it's an easy and fun way to connect with others and be part of something creative. Unlike traditional gallery exhibits, the DCW evolves in real time as participants add their unique contributions.

Explore the Interactive Sections

The Digital Community Whiteboard is divided into three sections:

- Community Canvas: A space for collaborative art-making, where you can respond to creative prompts or express yourself freely with no limitations.
- Writers' Corner: Share your micro-fiction stories inspired by our prompts, read and comment on others' work, and connect with fellow writers to exchange feedback and ideas.
- Engagement Board: Share your thoughts, ideas, and suggestions for enhancing Kingston's arts scene. Your feedback plays a vital role in shaping the future of the community.

The Digital Community Whiteboard is more than just a project – it's a moment of communal creativity, a chance to bring people together, and an invitation to celebrate Kingston's artistic spirit. Whether you contribute from home or in person, your voice matters and your creativity helps shape this one-of-a-kind experience. Let's turn imagination into connection – together!
